Name: _____ Date: _____

Learning intention

I can state an opinion and support it with two different, relevant reasons.

Should Our Class Have a Puzzle Session?

Our class should have a short puzzle session each week. It could help us practise working together and explaining our ideas.

First, puzzles give partners a shared problem to solve. For example, two students could sort pieces together and agree on where to start. This gives them a reason to listen to each other.

Second, puzzles let us practise explaining a plan. A student might explain why a corner piece belongs at the edge. Learning to explain our choices would be useful in other lessons too.

For these reasons, a planned puzzle session would be a useful part of our class week.

Teaching sequence

Use two sessions: read/discuss/plan (about 20–25 minutes), then write/revise (about 20–30 minutes). Adjust to the learner. Rehearse orally before writing; supply extra paper if needed. Models are teaching examples, not scripts to memorise.

Answers and acceptable alternatives

The writer supports a short weekly puzzle session. Reason 1 is practising cooperation/listening. Reason 2 is explaining a plan or choice. They focus on different skills even though both relate to learning.
Notice task: They repeat essentially the same enjoyment idea. Accept a distinct reason such as practising turn-taking, strategic thinking or managing class time, with an explanation.

Support, challenge and coaching

Support: Discuss two possible reasons orally. Offer First / Also / For example. The child chooses their position.
Challenge: Explain why the teacher should care about each reason. Avoid inventing survey results.
Ask: Is that a new reason, or the same reason in different words?

Record learning and check transfer

For each page 4 skill, record Not yet / With support / Independently. Give one specific next step and let the child make the change. Record adult prompting or scribing.
Later prompt: Should Our Class Have a Drawing Afternoon?. Hide the model and check whether the target skill transfers. These are classroom practice criteria, not NAPLAN scores.

Curriculum and preparation scope

Supports selected aspects of AC9E3LY06: planning, creating and editing writing, simple paragraphs and language control.
Guided skill practice for NAPLAN preparation; not an official test or score prediction.
