Draw, say and write

Aussie Primary Academy | Writing Growth

Name: _____

Today I am learning

I can say an idea about my picture and try to write it.

1. Draw yourself doing something in a playground.

2. Say your sentence to an adult.

Who is in your picture? What are they doing?

Example: I run in the sun.

3. Write your sentence.

Look at the example

I run in the sun.

Tell an adult: Who is doing something? What do they do?

Read your own sentence to an adult.

Point to the words as you read. Does your sentence match your picture?

Choose one change together.

☐ Add a missing word.

☐ Try a capital letter at the start.

☐ Try a full stop at the end.

Write your sentence again.

Draw a new playground action. Say a new sentence.

Focus and curriculum

Selected AC9EFLY06: short writing and shared editing. Focus on one complete idea, drawing-to-writing meaning and emerging sentence punctuation. Independent accurate spelling of every word is not expected.

Coach without taking over

Ask “What are you doing in your picture?” Repeat the child’s spoken sentence naturally. Let the child attempt writing using known sounds and words. Offer a small word bank only if useful: I / run / hop / sun. Read directions aloud; support vocabulary. Record any adult scribing separately.

Acceptable answers and common difficulty

In the example, I names the person and run tells the action. Accept another complete idea that matches the child’s drawing. “The slide” is a label, so ask “What happens on the slide?” Encourage a spoken sentence before writing. Sound-based attempts are useful evidence.

Check progress and transfer

Record: says one complete idea; attempts words for the idea; reads it back; joins in one edit. Mark Not yet / With support / Independently. Support: rehearse “I ___.” Challenge: add a relevant place detail. On another day, draw a different action and try again. This is beginning writing practice, not a handwriting or spelling test.
