Name: _____ Date: _____

Learning intention

I can improve an argument by grouping related ideas, making links clear and replacing vague words.

Draft argument: A Lunchtime Chess Club

A chess club would be good. People could do stuff. It would be nice and good.

Some people want other games. A club could run one lunchtime each week. Students could choose whether to join.

Chess gives players a problem to think about. For example, a player has to plan a move and consider what an opponent might do.

We should have it because it is good.

Writing detective

1. Which paragraph contains the clearest developed reason?
2. Which words are vague or repetitive?
3. How could the second paragraph become a clearer concern-and-response paragraph?

Notice and explain

A. Also, some students prefer other games. Also, chess is good.
B. Some students prefer other games, so the club should be optional.
Which explains a logical relationship? Why?

Your writing task

Rewrite the chess-club argument from page 1. Keep its main proposal, reason and concern. Reorganise the paragraphs, link the concern to a response and replace vague words. Keep claims realistic.

Clarify the proposal

What club is proposed? When would it run, and who would choose to attend?

Group the reason and example

Keep the thinking/planning reason and its illustration together.

Link the concern and response

Explain how optional attendance answers the concern about other interests.

Replace vague words

Choose precise words for what members do and why it matters.

Conclude consistently

Return to the proposal. Do not add an unrelated reason or unsupported promise.

Your turn

Rewrite the chess-club argument from page 1. Keep its main proposal, reason and concern. Reorganise the paragraphs, link the concern to a response and replace vague words. Keep claims realistic.
Useful words: optional, members, strategy, consider, therefore. Use words only when they fit.

My revised argument

Independent try: a new argument

Write a short argument for or against a lunchtime drawing club. Develop a reason, address a concern and link your paragraphs. Hide the chess-club model.

Read your draft aloud

[ ] Each paragraph has a clear job.
[ ] Reasons and examples stay together.
[ ] Links explain how the ideas relate.
[ ] My wording is precise and the conclusion fits.

One focused improvement

Before: People could do stuff. It would be nice.
After: Members could practise planning a move and considering an opponent's response.
Replace vague words with precise actions or benefits. Add a connective only when it expresses the relationship you mean.

My before-and-after revision

Original sentence(s):

Improved version:

Explain your change

My change helps the reader because _____

Final writing detective check

[ ] I checked capitals, punctuation and spelling.
[ ] I grouped related ideas in paragraphs where useful.
[ ] I can explain one meaningful change.

Teaching sequence

Use two sessions: read/discuss/plan (about 20–25 minutes), then write/revise (about 20–30 minutes). Adjust to the learner. Rehearse orally before writing; supply extra paper if needed. Models are teaching examples, not scripts to memorise.

Answers and acceptable alternatives

The third paragraph develops a planning reason with an example. Good, nice, stuff and it are vague or repetitive in this context. Link the concern to voluntary attendance: students may prefer other games, so the club should be optional. Accept other coherent reorganisations.
Notice task: B connects a concern to a relevant response. Repeating Also in A lists statements without explaining their relationship.

Support, challenge and coaching

Support: Label each draft paragraph: proposal, concern, reason, conclusion. Reorder before rewriting.
Challenge: Keep a useful sentence unchanged and explain why. Revision does not mean changing every word.
Ask: What does this paragraph do? Does your linking word match the actual relationship?

Record learning and check transfer

For each page 4 skill, record Not yet / With support / Independently. Give one specific next step and let the child make the change. Record adult prompting or scribing.
Later prompt: Revise a fresh short argument about a drawing club. Hide the model and check whether the target skill transfers. These are classroom practice criteria, not NAPLAN scores.

Curriculum and preparation scope

Supports selected aspects of AC9E5LY06: developing ideas, organising and linking paragraphs, precise vocabulary and text connectives. Guided skill practice for NAPLAN preparation; not an official test or score prediction.
