The School Garden

Room 2 had a small garden behind the library. The class planted lettuce, carrots and tiny tomato seedlings. Every Monday, two students checked the soil and watered the plants.

One morning, Noah noticed that some lettuce leaves had small holes. 'Something has been eating our plants,' he said. The class looked carefully and found a trail of silvery slime on the garden bed.

Their teacher, Ms Patel, explained that snails like soft green leaves. The class did not want to hurt the snails, so they made a safe plan. They placed orange peels in a corner of the garden. The next day, they gently moved the snails to a shady patch away from the vegetables.

After a few weeks, the garden looked healthy again. The students picked lettuce for a class salad and felt proud of their teamwork.
